

Regional Medical Director, Asia markets

An exciting opportunity exists for an experienced insurance medicine professional to join one of the leading reinsurance firms globally.

The firm's culture stresses high performance and collaboration and we hire the smartest people in the industry. We value creativity and curiosity and we work together without ego to bring value to the firm while revolutionizing the life and health insurance space.

It is one thing to hire smart people, it is another to empower them. This is the most important difference between us and our competitors.

At the forefront of our culture is collaboration. It's the one thing every employee must embrace to succeed. Our culture is defined by an environment where intellectual thinking, not red tape is prioritized. We believe risk is not to be avoided but to be embraced.

Reporting to the Chief Medical Officer you will work closely with product development teams across the region to provide technical medical advice and input into product development opportunities.

You will possess expert knowledge of medicine, current developments and research for new product and strategic business initiatives and undertake research and development projects to assist pricing teams or underwriting guideline and manual development.

You will possess a Medical Doctorate with a degree from an accredited medical school and have at least 5+ years' insurance medicine experience underwriting cases.
